

Views split on representation

By ROBERT HERRICK
University Staff Writer

Student reaction to the suggestion that the Women's and Freshman involvement Offices be eliminated from the Executive Council seems to be evenly divided.

About half of the students interviewed Thursday at the Wilkinson Center by a Daily Universe reporter supported the Constitutional Revision Committee's proposal, and half opposed it.

Reasons given for keeping the offices centered around the need for representation for freshmen and women, while those who wanted elimination denied that there presently is true representation.

Marla Duffin, a senior in special education from Hemet, Calif., said she wasn't qualified to comment on the Freshmen position, but had strong feelings about the Women's Office.

"I feel that women need a voting voice on the Executive Council. Her (Val Dala's) position should stay, if for nothing else, to voice women's opinions."

Wayne Mack, a sophomore in business management from Escondido, Calif., said that there should be no representation for freshman.

"Freshmen should have a voice, but the elections are blown up too much. There must be another way of getting representation," he said.

Those who supported elimination seemed to be more outspoken.

Connie Reguli, a senior in independent studies from Jeffersonville, Ind., supported elimination of the Women's Office.

"I have seen very little that they have done; maybe it's feasible to eliminate the office if there were just better representation of women's representation. I don't think it is necessary," she said.

Lance Lance, a freshman in gender studies from Carlsbad, Calif., expressed doubt about candidates and elections in general.

"The elections seemed to be a big ego trip. The candidates weren't interested in service, just in position and status."

Lance also said that student interests were the same no matter what the class standing, and that there was no need for specific fresh man representation in student government.

Chuck Gille, a graduate student in business from Oklahoma City, Okla., didn't have time to join the Constitutional Revision Committee's concern about overlapping duties between the two offices and other ASBYU offices.

"To the extent that there is over-lapping, they ought to be eliminated, and their duties absorbed into other offices," Gille said.

Other students voiced support for a compromise.

Discrimination suit dismissed

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — After promises from the Boy Scouts of America and the Mormon Church that racial discrimination would not be practiced, church-owned troops, a federal judge dismissed, Wednesday, an anti-discrimination suit against the scouts.

Lawyers for the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People and two black Scouts who filed the suit in July, agreed that allegedly discriminatory practices and policies have been discontinued and are "not likely to recur."

The dismissal followed 10 days of meetings between plaintiff lawyers and council for the scouts and The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormon).

An agreement signed by lawyers with scouts said the Scouts had complied with a restraining order by U.S. District Judge Willis W. Ritter against discrimination. The complaint included a warning that failure to abide by the order or result could be disenfranchisement of the sponsoring organization, the agreement said.

Reverend Dr. Dooley, NAACP president, said the suit would end discrimination in church-sponsored troops.

Deadline Monday for LSAT sign-up

Application for the Law School Admission Test (LSAT) will be administered Dec. 11 at BYU, it was announced by BYU Testing Center announced.

A spokesman for the testing center said students wishing to take the December examination must have their applications in the mail by Monday in order to avoid the $1 late fee.

Reed Hansen, chairman of the Reed Hall Law School admissions committee, said in an earlier Daily Universe story that students wishing to apply to the BYU law school should strongly urge themselves to take the December test.

He said students who get their applications in for the law school early will stand a better chance to be admitted because their applications will receive longer consideration.

Engineering students have been advised by an expert to examine themselves to find what kind of individual contribution they may make to technology.

An exhibit featuring the ceramic works of Warren B. Wilson of the BYU faculty is being shown at the BYU Art Secured Art Gallery, HFAC.

In a story printed in Thursday's Universe, a photo was mistakenly identified as that of Wilson.

Wilson is currently an instructor of ceramics in the Art and Design Department at BYU, received his B.A. at Utah State University and his master's degree in sculpture at the University of Iowa.

The ceramics exhibit will be on display through the end of November.

a least four to six weeks, it is suggested to take the test as soon as possible, he said.

Hansen stressed that applicants will not be considered for admission without submitting their LSAT scores.

The spokesman indicated that applications would be accepted until Nov. 18, but would have to be accompanied by the late fee.

Lungren added that the amount of fluid in Nixon's left lung continued to decrease.

Argentine guerrillas flout siege

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina — Outlawed Marxist guerrillas flooded Argentina's new state of siege Thursday killing an army officer, burning military vehicles and raiding a busy commuter railroad station.

The attacks were apparently a refusal of terrorists to accept the broad powers assumed Wednesday by President Isabel Peron to end what the government called "inhuman and criminal terrorist plots against the entire nation."

If less than 13 people have died since Mrs. Peron succeeded President Juan D. Peron on her death July 1.

Kissinger's visit to Turkey canceled

— A planned visit by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger to Turkey was called off Thursday under the weight of Turkish politics and a noisy anti-Kissinger demonstration. But his Middle East diplomacy whirled on with visits to Syria and Israel.

The cancellation of Kissinger's planned visit to Turkey on Friday was triggered by a Turkish political dispute over Cyprus policy.

Kissinger then flew from Damascus to Jerusalem where he assured Israel "there is no change in American policy on any of the issues" involved in his quest for Middle East peace.

voter turnout lowest since '46

TON (AP) — A preliminary return shows Wednesday turnout was the lowest, on a year of any year since 1946, and Press tabulation of nearly all returns indicated that only about one-third of the voting-age population went to cast ballots. Turnout may actually turn out to be per cent. The Census Bureau on the vote cast for House races, which is usually less than the vote in statewide races which was used for the calculation.

Tuesday's poor turnout was attributed in part to voter disinterest in politics after a year and a half of the Watergate scandals.

It is also traceable to wide-spread state laws making it difficult to register to vote.

Another factor is the new youthfulness of the electorate. Young people have proven to be less inclined to vote than their elders.

Bell limits phone books to help conserve paper

Mountain Bell Telephone has a new distribution policy to support the national goal to conserve paper. The new 1974 Provo edition will be distributed from Nov. 5 through Nov. 12.

According to Provo Commercial Manager Clifford Finch, residences will only receive one telephone book this year. Small businesses will receive one book per two business phones. Large corporations will negotiate with Mountain Bell for the number of telephone books they will need.

Finch said that there is a paper shortage in the country and Mountain Bell is attempting to cut down on the amount of books distributed.

There has been feedback from customers who say that only one book is necessary in their residence even if they use more than one phone.

Recipients who desire more than one telephone book will receive one if they ask those delivering the books, or call Mountain Bell.

"The phone company will provide you with the total number of directories they need," said Merrill Hynes, Mountain Bell District Manager. "There will be a card inside each directory giving the number to call if people need another book," he added.

Austria aids Jew emigres

VIENNA (AP) — Chancellor Bruno Kreisky, who leaves Saturday for an official visit to the United States, says Austria is determined to continue acting as a transfer point for Jewish emigres.

The flow of immigrants has never halted despite the closing last year of the Schoenau transit camp, the 62-year-old Socialist leader said in an interview with The Associated Press. Instead, other camps were arranged in the area. Two Arab states sent their Soviet Jews in September 1973, shortly after their train crossed the Austrian border. They held them until Kreisky agreed to close the Schoenau transit camp through which the immigrants funnelled to Israel.

Kreisky, who is of Jewish ancestry, was criticized by a number of foreign leaders, including Israeli officials.

"This has been completely misunderstood in the world," he said. "Everybody has been able to see in the meantime that we are determined to continue to be a transfer country."

He said some in Israel considered him a traitor for not automatically siding with Israel on every issue.

"I cannot allow any people living in Israel or anywhere else in the world, to tell me, 'You are not an Austrian, you are a Jew,'" he said.

The present transit camp in a Vienna suburb is to be closed because the city does not want it moved because it is close to a densely populated housing project. Kreisky refused to say whether a fourth transit camp would be set up or where it might be located.

"I do not plan to give any hints to these people," he said, referring to terrorists.

Dita Beard denies claim

DENVER (AP) — Former International Telephone & Telegraph Corp. lobbyist Dita Beard has contradicted statements by former Atty. Gen. John N. Mitchell that White House plumber G. Gordon Liddy spirited her out of Washington more than two years ago.

Liddy helped in "spirit[ing] her (Mrs. Beard) out of town (Washington),"

"It never happened that way," Mrs. Beard said. "I came out here myself. Liddy had nothing to do with it."

The Senate committee turned up evidence, including Mitchell's statement that Mrs. Beard may have been taken out of Washington so she wouldn't be on hand to testify about a memo she allegedly wrote.

The memo suggested that the administration settled a major antitrust suit against ITT in return for an ITT subsidiary's pledge of $400,000 toward the 1972 Republican National Convention.

U.S. asks for IBM break-up

NEW YORK (AP) Government lawyers say the giant International Business Machines Corp. has cornered 73 per cent of the nation's computer market and must be broken up if competition in the industry is to be encouraged.

A formal brief filed Wednesday in U.S. District Court, the Justice Department lawyers accused IBM of monopolistic price and marketing practices.

The government brought an antitrust action against IBM in 1969, and lawyers for both sides have met many times since then with federal Judge David Edelstein in an attempt to either reach a consent agreement or narrow the scope of issues to be brought to trial.

However, in a new brief the government asked the judge to order "a restructuring of the firm." The government did not indicate how it wanted IBM broken up.

Cited in the brief was IBM's practice of leasing rather than selling its computers.

In the brief the government contended leasing was less profitable, but it restricts possible competition.

Milk pail lighter, lighter...

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's milk production, the lowest this year since 1948, probably will continue to drop well into 1975 because of soaring feed costs, because highly processed dairy farmers say.

Officials said 1974 milk output is forecast at 114.5 billion pounds, down about one percent from last year.

For 1975, the USDA predicted a decline of about 1.5 per cent.

Slight improvement

The slight improvement was due primarily to a slowdown in feed cost increases, an increased availability of grain silage and generally favorable pasture conditions this fall, the department's Outlook and Situation Board said.

"However, this kind of gain seems temporary," the report said. "High feed costs in coming months will likely cause dairy farmers to cut back grain and concentrates feeding, thus limiting output per cow during the current barn-feeding season."

Lower prices for slaughtered cattle caused the reduced herd culling, officials said. A year ago, when cattle prices were much higher, many dairy farmers culled heifers sharply or sold out altogether to help offset soaring production costs.

Production later this year will depend in part on 1975 crop developments and subsequent feed prices, on milk prices and on the market for dairy cows, the report said. Officials said the farm price of milk is rising seasonally now, with an average of $5.12 per 100 pounds from October, up 64 cents from last July.

Edition's note: The questions for this column are solicited from Daily Universe readers. If you have a question, drop it off at the Health Center.

Q. How can you detect you are being frostbitten before it's too late? How should you treat frostbite?

A. Frostbite is exposure to the cold in which there is severe constriction of the blood vessels with impairment of circulation and tissue injury. Skin temperature of the exposed area F. is usually below 50° for the maintenance of a reasonable degree of manual dexterity in unacclimated persons. The signs and symptoms of frostbite are prolonged exposure to cold in which there is an occurrence of pain, palesness, numbness, abnormal color, impaired joint mobility, excessive sweating or in some instances no swelling or pain.

The treated part must be warmed carefully so as to relieve the spasm of blood vessels and restore circulation.

It is best always to adequately protect the body and extremities so the damaging exposure to cold does not occur.

Q. We have been married about a year and are anxious to have children, but we haven't had any luck. What is your medical advice?

A. Young couples who have attempted pregnancy without success for a year or more should probably seek medical help. Investigation normally starts with a complete history and physical examination of the wife by her physician, who, if necessary, the doctor may wish to perform a sperm check and examination of the husband since men are responsible for at least 40 per cent of all the infertility problems. If this does not shed light on the problem, then a step-by-step evaluation of the wife will be conducted by the physician, the husband and minor tests may be required quite easily without resorting to the more complicated, expensive tests. It is always best to seek medical attention if failure to conceive is causing worry or concern.

Q. The last time I went to see a doctor, a nurse who said she was a nurse practitioner treated me. Is she qualified?

A. The nurse practitioners here at the BYU Health Center are nurses who have had extensive working in hospitals and have had several weeks of intensive basic training as nurse practitioners before being allowed to see and treat patients. They are allowed to see and treat the routine and minor illnesses seen in the Health Center. Physicians are present at times to monitor and consult with the nurse practitioners and, therefore, they are not working independently.

Each patient is evaluated by the nurse practitioner and if the problem is more complicated than he or she is capable of handling, the patient is referred to a physician. This is the role of Dr. John Heinrichs in the Health Center to provide quality care for each individual who seeks medical attention.

Q. My roommate recently had a tuberculin skin test and said I should have one too. Is it important?

A. Tuberculosis is an infectious disease that is widespread in the world among humans and animals. It is transmitted via food, milk, dust particles, saliva and contaminated items from infected persons or animals.

The initial infection is usually located in the lungs but can infect any tissue of the body, depending on the route of transmission and the number of organisms contracted and the resistance of the patient.

Pasteurizing milk and getting rid of diseased cattle has helped in this country to eliminate the animal source of infection.

There were over 30,500 new cases of active tuberculosis reported in the U.S. in 1973. It is wise for every person to be skin tested every year, especially after trips to foreign countries, if chronically ill, malnourished or if exposure to an infected person is suspected.

TB skin testing is one of the best ways to detect the disease and can be carried out by your doctor, the Health Center or even most public health departments. Skin testing will be done at the Health Fair Nov. 13-15 in the Wilkinson Center.

U.S.-India:

Navy force to jar ties?

WASHINGTON (AP) — A U.S. Navy carrier task force is about to enter the Indian Ocean, a move that could jar the already improved atmosphere of U.S.-Indian relations.

Pentagon sources say the big aircraft carrier, three destroyers and a support ship are in Singapore preparing to sail into the Indian Ocean. The move comes after Indian government officials told Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger in New Delhi last week why they oppose U.S. naval operations in the Indian Ocean and development of a base on the island of Diego Garcia to support such operations.

President Ford has endorsed the policy, set in motion under former President Richard M. Nixon, to expand U.S. naval bases around the world. The Soviet Union already uses three naval bases in the Indian Ocean.

Christmas mail

Overseas deadlines nearing

By MARC HADDOCK
University Staff Writer

Monday is the deadline for Christmas packages being sent by regular mail to Central and South America or to Europe.

Christmas cards going by regular mail have another week, until Nov. 18, before that deadline passes, according to a bulletin put out by the Postal Service.

According to the bulletin, packages being sent by regular mail to Canada and Mexico must be sent Dec. 10, and cards to those areas by Dec. 7.

So far, Christmas mail from BYU has been lower than average, according to Virgil Schultz, BYU Post Office postal supervisor. Schultz pointed out many deadlines have passed already.

Airmail schedules for all areas of the world have no deadlines for Christmas mail until December. However, sending airmail packages to areas such as the Near and Far East can be costly, Schultz said.

Deadlines for regular mail to Africa and the Near or Far East have passed, as well as overseas military mail going to the Near East by regular mail. Postage paid (PAL) and space available (SAM).

Deadlines for mail going to the Far East by regular mail or SAM have also passed.

Methods used to be the deadline for military mail being sent to Africa and Central or South America by surface mail or SAM, and to Europe by regular mail.

Schultz said students should "mail early if they want it to get there early." He also encouraged students to use zip codes.

Schultz said students should not put letters inside packages being sent overseas. Such packages will be sent at letter rate.

He also said a special rate is charged on packages under two pounds going overseas if one end is left open, not taped shut.

Deadlines on airmail packages are Dec. 9 for Africa and the Near or Far East; Dec. 14 for Europe and Central America, and Dec. 20 for Canada and Mexico.

For airmail greeting cards, the Christmas deadlines are Dec. 14 for Africa and the Near or Far East, Dec. 16 for Europe and Central or South America and Dec. 19 for Canada and Mexico.

Packages going by regular mail to Alaska or Hawaii must be sent by Nov. 30. The deadline for packages sent by regular mail to the 48 contiguous states is Dec. 10.

The deadline for greeting cards sent by regular mail to all 50 United States is Dec. 15.

Airmail deadlines for packages and letters are Dec. 20 for Alaska and Hawaii and Dec. 21 for the 48 contiguous states.

Deadlines for overseas military mail can be obtained in the BYU Post Office on the first floor of the Wilkinson Center, Schultz said.

Ford's visit to Koreans criticized

Nixon to postpone testimony at trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard M. Nixon's lawyer informed U.S. District Judge Sirica J. Sirica Thursday that it will be two or three months before the former president could testify at the Watergate cover-up trial without endangering his health.

In an affidavit submitted to Sirica, Herbert J. Miller Jr., Nixon's lawyer, said that opinion was given to him by Dr. John W. Lungren, who has been treating Nixon for phlebitis.

Sirica said Nixon's testimony may have to be taken on videotape in California.

Meanwhile, Sirica overruled defense objections to the playing of 26 White House tapes as part of the prosecution's case. He said sufficient foundation had been laid to authenticate the recordings.

Prosecutor James F. Neal said that if Sirica ruled the tapes were admissible, the beginning of the Dec. 23, 1972 conversation Nixon had with H. R. Haldeman, then White House staff chief, would be played Monday.

It was during that conversation, six days after the Watergate break-in that Nixon and Haldeman discussed the possibility of using the Central Intelligence Agency to contain the FBI investigation of the scandal.

Only days after Nixon made a transcript of that conversation public last August, he was forced to resign the presidency.

Sirica rejected arguments from defense lawyers that the White House tape was illegal. Frank Strickler, a prosecutor, had argued any proof that the parties to the tape had intended to record it.

Federal law requires at least one party to a conversation be recorded.

Sirica said that "were made at the President's direction."

The Congress eventually applied to a statute installed in the House.

Academics committee offers help to students

By STEVEN HUNT
University Staff Writer

Methods used today to foster a high level of academic excellence have changed, but the goal is the same, according to a student spokesman.

That goal, according to Dr. Ray Alvard, is to help the student help himself.

As chairman of academic standards, Dr. Alvard said today's goal includes helping students to present academic problems as well as helping students with problems which affect their academic performance.

His said one of the biggest problems is the student's failure to read and follow instructions. Often a student will stop going to a class and fail the drop-out requirement. This results in a grade of UW, which is averaged in as an "F" or 0 credit with the student's other grades.

A recent survey also showed students at all levels of academic performance perceiving themselves as having the same potential problems. "The difference seems to be that some students are sufficiently motivated to take care of the situation before they develop into problems," said Dr. Alvard.

Dr. Alvard noted that his office can give guidance in planning, setting goals, study skills, vocational guidance, overcoming personal problems and in many other areas.

He also said for the student with problems in the study skills area, a booklet titled "How to Survive in College" is available in the BYU Bookstore for a small fee. The publication contains examples and exercises that are discussed in a series of instructional tapes available in the Learning Resources Center of the Hilleman Library.

Some students fail either to realize they have a problem or to do anything to correct the situation. After one semester of academic problems, such students are usually suspended because they fail to show any academic improvement, the chairman noted.

The number of students suspended last year was only one-half of those suspended 10 years ago," said Dr. Alvard. "It is better to suspend a student, however, than to continue to let him fail time and time again," he added.

Dr. Alvard, who prefers the term "educational intervention" to academic suspension, said that over 75 per cent of those students who return after suspension are able to succeed.

Dr. Alvard noted that his office can give guidance in planning, setting goals, study skills, vocational guidance, overcoming personal problems and in many other areas.

He also said for the student with problems in the study skills area, a booklet titled "How to Survive in College" is available in the BYU Bookstore for a small fee. The publication contains examples and exercises that are discussed in a series of instructional tapes available in the Learning Resources Center of the Hilleman Library.

Broadcasters will trim ads for children's TV

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Television Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Association of Broadcasters now lets stations subscribing to its code of standards air up to 12 minutes of "nonprogram" material—commercials, promotions, rebroadcasts and so forth—during each hour of their Saturday morning children's shows.

Faced with continued prodding by parents groups and the Federal Communications Commission action, the NAB in July cut that time to 10 minutes, starting in January, and 9 minutes by 1979.

It's been a goodly slice. But in recent years, the four Post-Newsweek TV stations and the five owned by Group W have had even fewer minutes per hour open to kiddie show sponsors.

Group W allows six minutes per hour, the Post-Newsweek stations eight minutes. Both companies say the restrictions apply to all children's shows, not just Saturday mornings.

There's a major catch: The restrictions only apply to programs produced by the stations or their parent companies or purchased by the companies for broadcast on the stations, the companies say.

All nine stations are network affiliates.

Company officials say they can't do anything about the number of commercials in network-provided shows; the networks all adhere to NAB guidelines because the ads are part of the network program packages.

Still, the companies' commercial time limits for non-network children's shows are considerably below the maximum the NAB code will allow in 1979. What were the tightest restrictions before?

"It's simple," says Ray Hubbard, vice president for programming at Post-Newsweek's stations in Milwaukee, Jacksonville, Fla., Washington, D.C., and Hartford, Conn.

"Saturday morning is prime viewing time for children," he said. "So we ask our stations to encourage children to look at more commercials in their prime time than adults do in their prime time."

Hubbard, who said the limit was adopted in 1970, referred to the fact the NAB only allows 9½ minutes of "nonprogram" material per hour in prime evening time, more blunt about why his company adopted a six-minute-per-hour rule.

He said while he wasn't involved in the decision, "the people here felt the children's programs were excessively commercial and that we'd do something about it in those areas where we had direct control."

He said while he wasn't involved in the decision, "the people here felt the children's programs were excessively commercial and that we'd do something about it in those areas where we had direct control."

Exhibit will feature fresh artists' work

An exhibit of freshman art with the title of "People, Places, and Things" will go on display in the ELWC Art Gallery Saturday and remain on view until Nov. 18. It includes the work of 34 students who have created a wide variety of paintings, graphics, and ceramics. Mitch Snow, a communications major and show coordinator, said about 70 individual pieces will be shown.

"Because the show is for freshmen only, we are not limiting entries to work done at BYU," Snow said. "Competition for the limited gallery space means that only the best work will be selected."

Of particular interest are ceramic works by Sue Taramocato, a series of surrealistic paintings by Randy Black of Woodland Hills, Calif.; figure studies by David Kornbluth; and a research paper on shipwrecks by Linda de Czesnak of Passumpsic, Vermont; a mixed-media piece by Brian Burch of Spokane, Wash., called "You'll never break my spirit no matter how you shout"; and a series of silk-screen magazine covers by Steve Smart.

Transferred from the White House beat to "CBS Reports" after Nixon resigned as president in August.

"It's as close to the truth as one could make it without writing that death, that is, water it down," what he attempted to say was, "Here it is as best I could make it out."

Rather's collaborator was Gary Paul Gates, a CBS news writer. Since CBS bars leaves of absence, Rather said, Gates quit CBS to work full-time on the project for six months, then was rehired by the network.

The book is in the classic feisty manner of the Texas Observer, but the Texan who coauthored it insists it wasn't written in that spirit.

"I like to think it's written in its own spirit," laughed Dan Rather, the hard-nosed CBS correspondent the network

TV host Kene Holiday discusses what to do if you discover a burglar at the "scene of the crime" tonight at 7 p.m. on the last program in the series "Burglar-Proofing Your Home," Channel 11.

Holiday also examines burglar alarms and alarm systems.

As Holiday explains, one thing a burglar will most often do is to make himself anonymous. Escaping recognition gives him another opportunity to make a "hit." Occasionally, however, even a professional burglar will make a mistake and breaks into an occupied home. To avoid a nasty and possible dangerous scene, viewers learn what steps to take in such a situation.

Kene and the three former burglars who have advised on the series summarize the key points of the series and some important and inexpensive steps viewers can take to protect themselves and their property.

BYU, ASU battle for crown

By TIM JACKSON
University Ast. Sports Editor

The Cougars' football WAC championship and Fiesta Bowl hopes may depend on their performance against the Sun Devils of Arizona State, a team they have not beat since 1965, the last time a BYU team won the league title.

The contest will be seen by what is expected to be one of the largest crowds at a home game in years. About 40,000 fans are expected, according to the ticket distribution office. The game will also be shown as ABC's regional game of the week. A sellout from the game will also be shown on ABC's Sunday "College Football Preview."

Devil defense tough

Coach Frank Kush and the Sun Devils will be coming into Saturday's game following a disappointing loss to UTEP 31-27 last Saturday. The Miners scored more points than anyone else in the WAC this year, and ASU is the only other team so far this year. ASU has given up a total of only 73 points, while their offense has managed to put up 183 points on the boards.

"We played great, and they played great," Coach Kush said about last week's loss.

The better part of the ASU team is in decent shape because of its aggressiveness, according to Kush, and the strong point of the defense is linebacker Bob Breunig. Against UTEP, Breunig had 10 tackles, nine of them unassisted.

The defense suffered a setback when junior defensive tackle Chris Lorenzen was sidelined by a dislocated kneecap against UTEP. He will be out two to three weeks and will be replaced by freshman Robert Allison.

ASU leads pass defense

An area the pass-conscious Cougars will keep in mind is the Sun Devils WAC leading pass defense. Last week against Air Force quarterback Gary Sheide was able to complete 18 of 30 passes for 213 yards and two touchdowns in the Cougars' 12-10 win.

ASU ranks first in the WAC in three defensive areas (total defense, defense against the rush, and scoring defense). BYU is second in total defense. The Cats have allowed six opponents only three touchdowns rushing while ASU has scored 14 by that route.

Offensive line troubles

The biggest single problem facing the Sun Devils concerns

Sports

The Daily Universe

at Columbia (ASU lost 9-0), Wyoming at Laramie (ASU won 16-10) and against UTEP at Tempe (ASU lost 31-27).

BYU on the other hand, has one of the top passing games in the nation, ranking fourth in team passing. Quarterback Gary Sheide is presently second in the nation in passing offense, and his completion rate is 61 percent. Completes a game, New Mexico's injured Steve Myer is currently No. 1 in that category with 17.5 completions.

Sheide needs 27 completions against ASU to take over Myer's position. Sheide is also rapidly moving up in the nation's total offense category, presently ranking 11th with 180.0 yards a game.

Cougars need 24

According to J.D. Helm, the Cougars offensive back-field could only score to score 24 points to beat ASU. Prior to last week's game against Air Force, BYU was averaging 33 points a game.

The one that could come through in favor of BYU for Saturday's game is the weather. According to local weather reports, intermittent rain or snow is forecasted, and from their record, the Sun Devils play much better in warm Arizona weather.

Weather hex Devils

Last year, winter put a hex on the Devils when they lost to the University of Utah in Salt Lake. ASU lost to Utah in its only WAC loss that year. So far this year "off-field" bungos have continued to plague ASU as the Sun Devils have played five games on muddy fields against Missouri.

Sheide will also have fresh split end Jeff Nilson back and ready to play for an added threat with the passing game.

Covina, Calif., and Penrose from Montpelier, Idaho.

"We are nearing our pre-season practices; a winning season and helping the varsity whenever possible."

This season the Jayvee team has posted wins over Dixie, Ricks, Snow, Utah State and the Air Force.

Kitten gridders face Utes today

BYU's junior varsity football season has narrowed down to one game, a road game against the undefeated team from the University of Utah this afternoon in Provo.

The Cougar Jayvees (5-0) will meet the Utah Jayvees (4-0) at 4 p.m. today on the Provo High School playing field.

"We won't be satisfied until we give up one point," says coach Mel Olson, who coaches the Cougars jayvee squad to an undefeated season last year. "We feel we will have to stop the Utes' running attack and get on our own offense, and we can't afford to make any mistakes."

Utah's running game features Steve Peake, an outstanding running back from Salt Lake City. The Utes also have a good quarterback in Homer Warner.

The Cougar Jayvees have been very impressive this year. They are averaging 450 yards per game on offense, while limiting opponents to about 200 yards per game defensively.

Coach Olson has rotated three quarterbacks—Rob

Wilson, Jeff Duva and James Brocker—and all are completing about 60 per cent of their passes with the same amount of time.

The running backs include Larry Kemp, a standout from Idaho; Dan VanValkenburg, younger brother to Pete VanValkenburg; Crow's Roger Courtney; and Canadian John McCorquindale.

And like the varsity squad, we give up one point," says coach Mel Olson, who coaches the Cougars jayvee squad to an undefeated season last year. "We feel we will have to stop the Utes' running attack and get on our own offense, and we can't afford to make any mistakes."

Defensively, the Kittens are getting strong performances from Rory Rauchensback, middle linebacker from Lynwood, Calif.; Ross Wood, defensive star from Durango, Colo., and linebacker Jim Laffin from Durango, Calif.

Line play on defense has been strong with players like Ross Varner (215, 64-4) and Craig Christensen (6-3, 225).

Utah, Cougar harriers

will contend tomorrow

BYU and Utah, two of the intermountain area's strongest cross country teams, tangle Saturday at 9:30 a.m. at Cascade Golf Course in Orem.

The Utah squad is one of the WAC's top-rated teams, sporting an undefeated record. "They look tough," commented BYU Assistant Coach Larry Berryhill. "They have a couple of new guys they picked up from a junior college in Spokane." Coach Berryhill said the Ute squad knocked off a fine team from San Jose State last week.

BYU will be at full strength for the first time in several weeks. Stig Roar Husby, the freshman for Norway, is once again ready to run after being off the film and several other problems during the fall. Berryhill said he had a good week in practice recently, and hopefully he'll show up in top form. "Benton has just been working too hard," observed Berryhill.

The 5-mile race is being held at the hilly Cascade Golf Course to prepare BYU for next week's conference meet at Albuquerque. "On the road, you're always the underdog, you're either going up or down a hill, and we're not," Berryhill said.

Saturday's meet will wind up the dual meet schedule for the Cougars, with only the conference and NCAA meets left to run.

Blanc ready to go despite rib injury

By ROGER HOSKINS
University Sports Writer

In the fifth game of the 1973 season, freshman halfback Jeff Blanc was promoted to replace the injured Dave Coon. He didn't get a starting nod until he was second to the last game of the year. It was an effort that paid off for him as Cougars No. 1 running back ever since.

In that game against Utah, he gained 89 yards on the ground and added another 57 yards as a pass receiver. He also scored two touchdowns, helping lead BYU over the Utes 42-21.

From that game to Saturday's clash with Arizona State, Blanc has been the Cougar's No. 1 running back.

Good opening game

In the opening game of the season, Blanc carried the ball 32 times against Hawaii and gained 165 yards. For the year, he's carried the ball 127 times and picked up 520 yards. In addition, he has caught 24 passes for 254 yards.

More important than that, in the last three games he's played, Blanc has scored six touchdowns — two in each game. Just about the only thing that could stop the sophomore tailback is injury, and that's what happened.

In the Arizona game, he caught a screen pass and turned upfield only to be hit from the side by three Wildcat defenders. Blanc kept playing for another quarter, but by the time one-half hour had passed, his arm and side had gone numb. Post-game x-rays showed a cracked rib that would keep him sidelined.

Blanc will play

It's only been two weeks since the fracture, but Blanc will be back in the line up for the Cougars Saturday sharing duties with Charlie Af. You.

Blanc's desire has played a key role in his recovery and in his first gaining the position as the top BYU running back, according to J. D. Helm, BYU's experienced backfield coach.

"I've coached faster and stronger runners than Jeff," said Helm "but never one with as much desire."

"He has one of the best attitudes of any player I've coached — he's constantly working to improve himself. His attitude catches on, too. The offensive line knows Jeff will get some yards and they give 100 per cent to open the holes for him."

Blanc credits line players who credit the offensive line for his achievements this year. "Anyone," said the tailback, "can be a great back. All you have to do is hit the hole."

"The reason I do well is because there are six great guys in front of me opening the holes," said Blanc. "I'm not our leading rushing game. Blanc says those aren't necessarily his best performances. "The best games," said Blanc, "are those you win."

What about the ASU game coming up — can BYU beat Frank Kush's Sun Devils?

"If we play the way we're capable of playing, no one can beat us. It's going to be dogfight, but if we score 24 points, we'll win."

Size no obstacle

Standing six feet tall and weighing 187 pounds, the Cougar tailback is small by major college standards and Coach Helm thinks Blanc's size plays a part in the possibility that he may be injury prone.

"Because of the type of runner Jeff is," said the backfield coach, "he exposes himself to a lot of damage. When he's in the open field, he just as soon runs over people as go around them."

Blanc says he decided to become a football player when he was nine years old in Boise, Idaho. He and his big brother played on the same junior team in Boise, Idaho and from that time on he says he wanted to play football.

Cady chose idol

Blanc's childhood idol was Bill Cady, his best friend's brother who played halfback for Borah High School in Boise and made high school All-American. It was Blanc's dream to follow in Cady's footsteps and Blanc did quite well, making the all-state at Borah during his senior year.

Why did Blanc choose BYU over the other schools recruiting him?

"I liked the atmosphere," said Blanc, "and the church was part of it. When I visited here the people were very friendly, too."

Kragthorpe big factor

"The biggest reason, though, was Coach Kragthorpe. He recruited me and I really liked him and so did my parents. Since I've been here he will call me up on the phone to see how I am and make sure everything's all right. He's really been like a second father to me."

BYU Security police are taking action against parking violators by towing their cars away, as is witnessed by this Universe photograph.

Car tow-aways mount

Universe photo and story
by NIEL D. BURT

If you find your car is not where you left it in the morning...and you did not register your car with BYU, chances are your car has been towed away by the man who wears the star.

A student at BYU either part or fulfills needs to register his car with BYU Security. Even if the car is dad's, mom's a friend's or whatever, if you plan on driving it to school it had better be registered.

Car registration at BYU is free after tuition is paid, unless the student plans on purchasing a parking decal.

If Security should find an unregistered car, a warning citation is issued, stating the driver has parked in violation of the BYU registration regulation. All such warning citations are kept on a list at the BYU Security office. This year, the list has over 700 warnings (as to individual cars). When a warning citation is given the officer checks to see if that car is on the list. If the car is found to be on the list and the driver is a chronic offender (more than two warnings), a tow truck is called, and there goes the car.

Officer Clive Winn explained that the fine amount to $10 tow fee and a $10 failure-to-register fine. Therefore, failure to register a car will end up costing $20. Winn noted there is one student owing almost $100.

Even though the fines are costly, students still don't register their cars, noted Winn. "They seem to think that they will never be caught."

Winn issues about 35 warnings a day and Dave Nordstrom, the man who tows for BYU, said he tows about five cars a day.

Winn said if a visitor wishes to park on campus, he should see Security for a visitors pass, which is given to visitors free of charge. Security is glad to give out passes for as long as the visitor is planning on staying, continued Winn.

When some of the offenders find out their car has been towed away, they fly off the handle and say "I suppose that's what you get for not out to get anyone," said Winn. "When a car gets towed, you can be sure the offender has received sufficient warning."

What should a driver do? Make sure any car he drives to school is registered with the university. All proper registration can do big headache.

OPINION—COMMENT

Brigham Young University

Sordid to sublime

In the space of two hours, television has the capacity to take a person from the sordid to the sublime; from the warped world of prostitutes and pimps to the solemnity of the Washington, D.C. Temple. Yes, in 120 minutes, the viewer can be carried across this great gulf and still sandwich in the last half of a Genn movie.

At least, that's how it was this past Monday night in front of the TV. The Washington Temple special lifted the viewer to a high peak of sublimity and exquisite beauty. The evening news dropped him into a low valley of degradation, disappointment and disgust. Consider, for example, these Monday night stories: prostitutes in Salt Lake grossing $150 to $200 a night; people eating dog food being warned about the dangers of lead poisoning in their inflation-fighting eating habits; a Watergate trial bombshell telling of more 1972 campaign intrigue and bribery.

Monday night's news was like a recording of yesterday's news, and last week's news—it goes on and on with more bad news than good news. Monday night, however, was especially striking in that it clearly illustrated the contrasts between the uplift offered by the Temple special and the sudden descent given by the news of the day.

The TV's off now and the viewer wonders about this wide TV sweep. The people interviewed in the special seemed to glow with enthusiasm about the feeling they had as they toured the temple. Perhaps the days typical news helps explain why. People are growing weary of news about inflation and WIN buttons, Watergate trials and election reform, auto sales declines and supermarket inclines. They want to be optimistic and hopeful; yet, they see reality telling them to be cynical and pessimistic. They want to believe, but they fear disappointment. They look for something to help them lift their eyes upward. And then in our nation's capital where all our problems seem to symbolically hover in a search for solutions, a symbol of contrast emerges. It stands apart from the entanglements of the world. Small wonder, then, that when the temple opened to the public, the long lines formed and the telephones rang constantly.

A brief tour through the temple offered a pleasant relief from a world which is oftentimes unpleasant. Yes, for some the contrast lasted only for a few moments—but they were magnificent moments. And perhaps in their passing, they might be extended into the lives of people until ultimately the good news of life will surpass the bad.

Couldn't be saved

Editor's note: In the Nov. 6 issue of the Daily Universe, the tree removed from the library area was referred to as a popular, Botanists explain that it was one of the cottonwood species, with the common name Carolina poplar and Latin name Populus deltoides. The genus name is poplar.

You who rested under its lengthy limbs may miss the cottonwood south of the Harold B. Lee Library and may regret its rather harsh removal from the lawn dedicated for the addition. But all things considered, its removal could not be avoided.

The cottonwood was bulldozed last week by a Layton Construction worker, and now lies wasting in a city dump, a victim of progress on a campus whose landscape seems everchanging. Thirty minutes, at most, was all the time needed to uproot the 50-, possibly 75-year-old tree.

The cottonwood and its companion elm, sycamore and locust trees, several of which now line other walkways at BYU, were owned in turn by Jesse Knight and the Provo Fourth Ward before being presented to the university. They shaded picnickers in earlier days, and before, during, and after the Second World War, sheltered student-occupied trailers during a Provo housing shortage.

But, although this cottonwood was historically valuable, being at the last of its kind from the grove, it couldn't have been saved.

It was a massive tree, weighing at minimum 40 tons, and $5 to $6,000 would have had to be mustered for its gentle withdrawal. The cost was far beyond what the university had considered in the budget drawn for "all preparations of the site" for the new library addition.

The project would have been a lengthy, laborious one, initiated two years ago to allow feeder root development close to the trunk so the tree would survive transplantation. After that initial period, the root bottom would have had to be boxed in steel and a chain or cable used to sever the remaining roots to render the tree free-standing. Its weight, plus that of the steel box, would have then been hoisted and the tree transplanted elsewhere. A company from the area with equipment equal to that task would be difficult to find.

Steps could have been taken in 1972 to prepare for the tree's removal (in the event that money could have been approved for the project), because those involved have realized since the library was built in 1962 that an addition would be necessary. But until the Board of Trustees accept the final bid for a construction project, the date for its commencement is unknown. In this instance, the contract was signed in late October and the go-ahead announced for plant removal soon after.

The chances of the tree's survival after transplantation were 50 per cent at best because of the tree's enormity and its uncertain health since its bout with lightning last winter. The risk of going ahead with those odds would have been great.

One can lament the loss of the cottonwood and the history it commemorated, but practically must prevail. The tree's ultimate fate could not be avoided.

Letters to the Editors

Beauty

Editor: Observe Brother Wight, your Oct. 25 letter has resulted in another BYU who probably "don't got it" to "knock BYU's beauty contests," despite your well-intended advice.

Since you admit the homecoming court is the result of a popularity contest, perhaps it's pointless to remind that all these schools should put the placing emphasis on physical beauty.

However, the inane needs of BYU are not the only ones who feel this way. There's a nationwide attempt to continue rewarding women for their appearance. This is the Women's Liberation Movement, but regardless of its origin, the point is valid.

There's enough discrimination among men and women based on appearance, without contests to aggravate the problem.

It's not only the women who think beauty contests are pointless. The reception of the homecoming concert was neither enviable nor the result of envy. I didn't hear any female voices shouting rude comments, but did hear male ones. The applause was nothing more than a solid golf clap. Where were all those homecoming enthusiasts to support the royalty? Where were all those rabid, slavering males who appreciate a girl who's got it? And why did all those green-with-envy girls seem so indifferent?

And furthermore, if it's only the homely BYU coeds that don't support the beauty contests, why didn't we at least get enough voter turnout to allow the student body to have a voice in which beauty represents them?

Editor:

May I answer Ray Barbosa's plea for guidance concerning his desire to have the playing of the national anthem?

It seems that the citizens of the United States, and especially the ones attending BYU, demand rather elaborate and patriotic displays of the national anthem.

However, if it's really important to the student body that it be played, it should be done in a dignified manner, such as during a "Star Spangled Banner" during a racing blizzard.

Important

Editor:

Several weeks ago, a young girl in the Wilkinson Center broke down and started crying. Several students came to the girl's aid, tried to comfort her, and asked what was wrong. She made the comment how homesick, discouraged, and left-out she felt at school; then she made a statement that had haunted her for weeks. She said, "I'm just not important."

As she disappeared in the crowd, I was left wondering what I could have said to that girl that might have made her feel better. I wrote this letter as an answer to that girl who has labeled herself as "unimportant" in the hopes that maybe she might realize how important she really is.

Dr. Joseph S. Sizor once penned what I feel are very meaningful words:

"A stone may sparkle, but it cannot make it a diamond; a man may have money, but that does not make him a success; a student may be brilliant, but he may not be a philosopher. It is the unimportant that really counts and determines the course of history. The greatest forces in the world are never spectacular. . . . There is, however, no life, however humble, but may take its place in the building of a brave and better world."

If it's so easy to exaggerate the importance of the important and to underestimate the unimportant, then let me assure you that your example is appreciated, your life is noticed, and you are, in fact, extremely important.

Ticket

Editor:

I am writing in response to the still absurd ticket policy at BYU. We are having to put up with at BYU. I would call your attention to the fact that many students have been asking themselves: Why do those who want good seats need to stand in line at ridiculous paydown hours? Why do we have to return home to buy tickets for the game, and again stand in another meaningless line?

I fully believe there is a system in the infirmary section that will eliminate lines altogether. Part of the proposed and voted ticket program now in operation, I believe, has room for improvement. The suggestion proposed eliminates the part of the best 2,000 first-come, first-served policy. To replace this part of the program, just have all seats available to be filled by branches. This way, a person, whether or not he has to work hours that would not allow him to pick up those pre-drawn tickets, would have an equal opportunity under the full raffle system. Remember, this is only a suggestion.

Cut women and fresh offices

Each April students converge upon small curtain-covered booths to cast their vote for student representatives of their choice.

And as the students vote, the politicians who will best represent them, they actually pick leaders who sometimes unintentionally divide the student body.

Recently the Constitution Revision Committee proposed that the Office of Freeman Involved Students and Women's Office be reduced and the Organizations Office not eliminated but innovated.

Those women and freshmen who feel threatened by the resolution perhaps are ignoring the possibility that they are capable of doing a better job than the men who hold the remaining nine offices, and need not stay enclosed in the two remaining offices that seem their only resort.

It can be said that women will have no chance for representation in the ASBYU government—but when the Constitution does it does not give the right to run for office in the ASBYU. Freshmen may fear being further lost in the mass of add/drop cards and maze of construction on campus.

The Freshman Office, currently chosen after the beginning of the year allows the new students representation that could not be established during the previous spring.

However, it also fails to make the student body aware that it is a member of the student body and part of a separate sect singled out as unimportant.

However, don't we, each spring, push half of our student body into two offices and allow the remaining male upperclassmen to dictate our concerts, art exhibits, like the senior class with rock into nearby buildings to avoid being drenched or otherwise unimportant?

It may be most surprising that these vice presidents of the Freeman Involved Students and Freshman Office in earlier years have not realized just how restricted their offices are in giving the representation they claim, and have failed to offer a similar resolution themselves.

Football emotions pe

The Cougar stadium is "gonna" rock with excitement this Saturday when BYU faces off against Arizona State.

The big time college football scene is rich in human emotion for fans as well as players. Surely many Cougar faithfuls were cheering out loud as they watched the BYU-University of Colorado game last Saturday. I overheard one student telling a friend how he accidentally punched a hole in a lamp shade jumping to his feet as Shiede connected on one of his touchdown passes.

To me, football is the week's game will portray a more mixed-motifs of life. The old saying "the thrill of victory, the agony of defeat" has a lot of substance and meaning to both players and fans. The game provides a setting where the actors (players)—deliberately pitted against each other—are allowed a short 60 minutes to intensely play the parts of wins and learning.

Good Old American compete they call it. The result: men deep inside themselves to bring their emotional and physical self to bear. I have been to the Cougars' games and the playing of and physical is what the fans expect to see this Saturday.

Football evokes a maximal participation. Many fans burst out cheering or resting in gloom silence.
